Answers to key questions about the investor-owned electric utility industry and the all-electric future

How does Edison help create job opportunities in Southern California?

Investor-owned companies such as Edison have a real stake in the prosperity of their home communities — and are busy clear across the country doing something about building business and attracting industry. Example? Here is one of a series of national advertisements published by Southern California Edison.

This ad dramatizes the advantages of sun-kissed Culver City as the "perfect plant site" for a modern industry. The advertisements are part of a consistent drive by Edison to attract industries to the 11-county area which we serve.

How does the electric industry help ease your tax load?

The investor-owned electric utility companies rank first of all industries in total taxes paid in support of local, state and federal governments (see chart below).

INDUSTRY	1962	1961
INVESTOR-OWNED ELECTRIC UTILITY CO'S	100	100
COMMUNICATIONS	85	85
CHEMICALS	75	75
BEVERAGES	65	65
PETROLEUM REFINING	55	55
FOOD	45	45
MOTOR VEHICLES	35	35
MACHINERY	25	25
TOBACCO MANUFACTURERS	15	15
ELECTRICAL MACHINERY	10	10

One of the many important differences between government-operated power agencies and investor-owned electric companies is this: The former are supported by taxes — while the investor-owned utility companies are major supporters of the community, the state and the nation.

Southern California Edison pays taxes to help build and maintain schools, fire stations, police systems and other mainstays of our way of life. Edison's total taxes for 1962 came to $85.7 million (that's about one quarter million dollars every day of the year)! Taxes represent almost 24 cents of every dollar of our revenue.

Night light for a nervous dachshund

One day a man called us about a dog. Seems the dog was afraid of the dark. The man at Southern California Edison (a dog-owner himself) suggested a special night light and a good electrician. Result: dreamless sleep for a calmed canine and a delighted owner. Day after day (and night) the investor-owned electric utility companies do more than provide low-cost electricity. We try to please every customer. Like any citizen, we pay taxes to help build the new schoolhouse, library and fire station. We take pride in being good neighbors—and in actively helping to build our home communities. For news of how community job opportunities are being opened up for you and your neighbors, read right.
